

A photograph of a modern office interior. The space features a high ceiling with a perforated metal grid and several large, circular recessed lights. Two long, thin, cylindrical pendant lights hang from the ceiling on the left. The walls are primarily white, with a section of vertical wood slats on the left. The floor is a light-colored, polished concrete. Several large, cylindrical concrete pillars support the ceiling. On the right, there is a glass-walled office space with wooden doors. The overall design is clean, minimalist, and industrial.

Description:

The new CSS AG headquarters in Künzell consists of creative workspaces with around 5,200 m<sup>2</sup> of floor space: 220 employees recently moved into the spacious building with an inner courtyard and floor-to-ceiling windows. The aim of the new building was to promote internal communication and to enable a differentiated range of work zones in addition to the classic office workplaces. This has been more than successful: The bright, open rooms provide the best working conditions and a pleasant atmosphere.

The Lindner Group supplied various wall and door systems for the project. The Lindner Life Freeze 137 and Lindner Life Pure 620 glass partitions act as transparent room dividers while maintaining the brightness in the rooms. In the case of the Lindner Life Pure 620, the butt of the glazing was covered with wooden panels – this creates an optimal connection between the glass partition and the adjoining wooden door leaves, which were veneered in oak just like the associated portal door and frame as well as the partition profiles. The flexibility of the glass partitions became apparent when the client decided over time to make the office worlds even more open: Together with Lindner, some of the wall elements were then quickly and easily dismantled.
